

Metals & Mining

Diversified Debate III – How do you grow a Mining Company?

- Tour de Mining — The super cycle appeared like the perfect opportunity for the mining sector, a downhill run to the finishing line; instead what transpired was more akin to a pile-up, resulting in cuts, bumps and bruises. Nevertheless, the sector has delivered strong outperformance relative to the market and in this note we analyse the factors that drove this performance on a total shareholder return (TSR) basis.
- Divergence in performances in the period between 2003 and 2013 — The performance within the large diversified miners was stark, BHP Billiton delivered the strongest TSR at 884%, followed by Rio Tinto at 408% and Anglo American at 188%. In breaking down the drivers of TSR, prices and margins were the largest contributor to TSR and a much bigger factor than volumes. Capital allocation was the differentiating factor, with share buybacks (or rights issues) being a huge driver of absolute and relative performance, along with dividend payments.
- Entering the Mountain stage — In our view, the next ten years the sector is likely to be fought in an uphill battle on costs, capital and cash returns, against a headwind of declining commodity price (refer to our Super Cycle Sunset note). This raises an important question — are the large diversified mining companies just too big to succeed? As an example, BHPB's market cap in 2003 was around $34bn versus today at ~$192bn. Assuming the current payout ratios, the large miners will deliver between a 6.8% and 7.5% p.a. return on a TSR basis over the next decade, and it is unlikely the miners can grow out of this predicament. This will likely result in the sector underperforming the broader market, and in our view the most nimble competitor, (who slims, spins and grows) will win the yellow jersey.
- Sector preference — Our sector view is bearish (Bear Digs Deeper); Rio Tinto remains our only Buy amongst the large-cap diversified mining companies. We have Sell recommendations on ENRC, ANTO, FQM, NHY, BOL, ABG, FRES, HOCM, RRS, SSAB and KCOG. We remain underweight on the gold and base metals companies and our key underweight in the large-cap miners is Anglo American.

Total Shareholder Return 2003 to 2013

We calculate that between 2003 and 2013:

- Anglo American delivered a Total Shareholder Return (TSR) of 188%,
- Rio Tinto delivered a TSR of 408%, and
- BHP Billiton was the clear winner amongst the large diversifieds at a TSR of 884%.

Interestingly the dividend component was around 29% for BHPB, 30% for Rio and 33% for Anglo American; arguably this is a situation where the investors chased share price appreciation and earnings growth ahead of dividends. In comparison, in the period between 1993 and 2003 dividends represented over 50% of the TSR for the large mining companies.

TSR by components:

We have broken the TSR of the mining companies down into the key drivers of dividends, prices, volumes, margins, shares on issue, market rating. The driver as a % of the overall TSR is given in Figure 4 (based on our calculations).

The key takeaways in our view are:

- Prices and margins were the largest driver to performance and a much bigger driver than volumes.
- Share buybacks (or rights issues) were a huge driver of absolute and relative performance. And finally dividends are important.

BHP Billiton

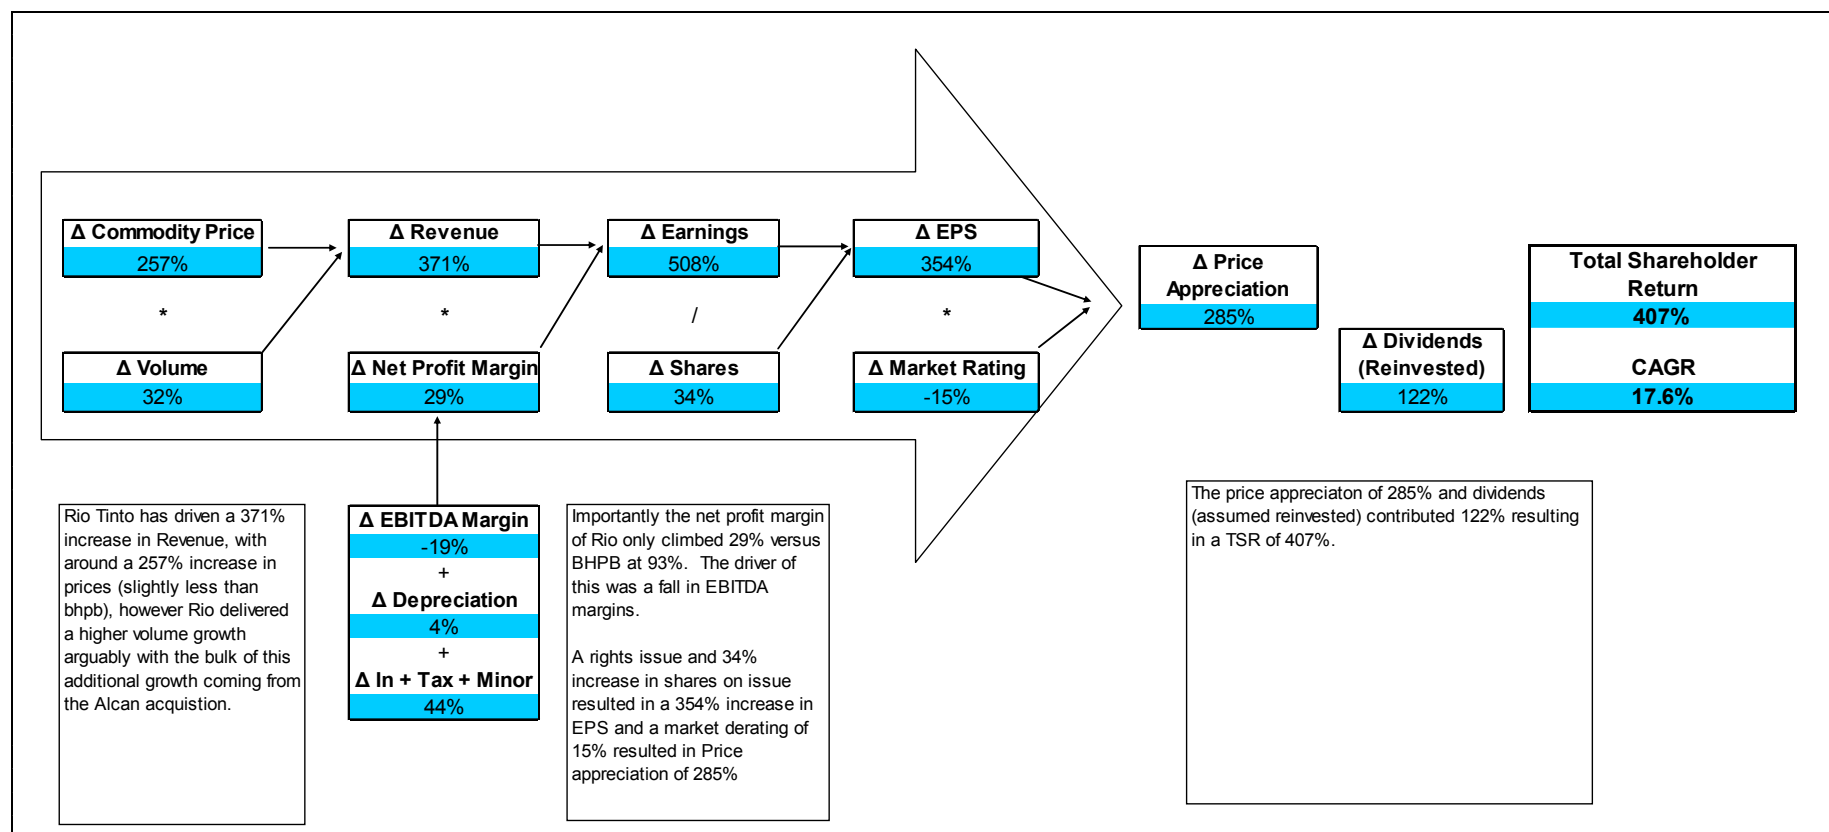

For each company, we have broken down the TSR components from 2003 to 2013. The charts should be read from left to right; as an example, for BHPB we calculate that its commodity price basket, rose by 273%, volumes increased by 24%, net profit margins increased by 93%, the company bought back around 12% of issued shares and the market derated BHPB on a PE basis by 27%. This resulted in the shares increasing by 636%, together with dividends reinvested of 248% gave a TSR of 884%.

The next decade

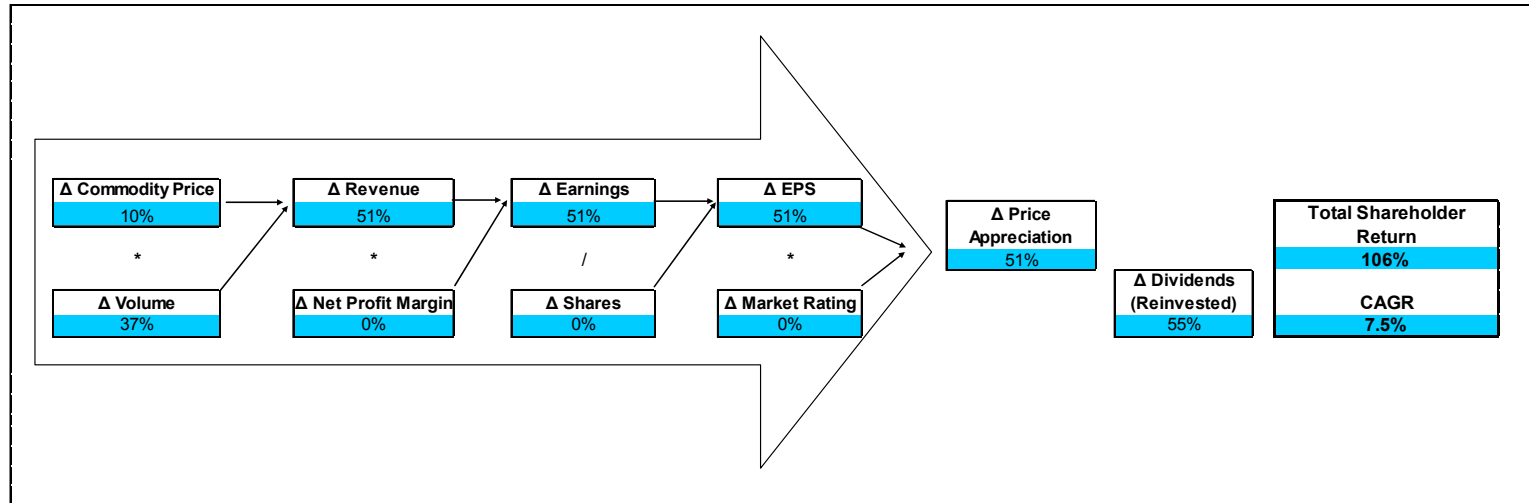

In our view, over the next ten years the sector is likely to be in an uphill battle on costs, capital and cash returns, against a headwind of declining commodity price. This raises an important question — are the large diversified mining companies just too big to succeed? In the following charts, we repeat the analysis using our forecast volume growth rates, commodity price basket, and payout ratios. We have kept margins constant and assumed no change in the shares on issue or market rating. On this basis, the large miners will deliver between a 6.8% and 7.5% p.a. return on a TSR basis. In our view, this will result in the sector underperforming the broader market, based on a long-term return on equities markets of around 10%. In our view, the only way the large miners can outperform the market is to slim down, sell underperforming assets, and increase the payout ratio, or implement a consistent buyback model over the coming decade – refer our Diversified Debate I and Diversified Debate II reports.

Back to the Future - Total shareholder return 1993-2003

We believe that the next ten-year period is likely to be akin to 1993-2003, where commodity prices traded broadly sideways — the focus of the companies was on strongly positive NPV growth and cash returns. If we look at the 1993 to 2003 period, Rio Tinto delivered a 154% TSR with 51% of this occurring via the dividend. This is a similar return to what we predict over the next decade, refer above charts. In the case of BHP Ltd (the merger with Billiton occurred in 2001), the company delivered a TSR of 138%, of which 58% was driven from the dividend.

Guide to Citi Research Fundamental Research Investment Ratings:

Citi Research stock recommendations include an investment rating and an optional risk rating to highlight high risk stocks.

Risk rating takes into account both price volatility and fundamental criteria. Stocks will either have no risk rating or a High risk rating assigned.

Investment Ratings: Citi Research investment ratings are Buy, Neutral and Sell. Our ratings are a function of analyst expectations of expected total return ("ETR") and risk. ETR is the sum of the forecast price appreciation (or depreciation) plus the dividend yield for a stock within the next 12 months. The Investment rating definitions are: Buy (1) ETR of 15% or more or 25% or more for High risk stocks; and Sell (3) for negative ETR. Any covered stock not assigned a Buy or a Sell is a Neutral (2). For stocks rated Neutral (2), if an analyst believes that there are insufficient valuation drivers and/or investment catalysts to derive a positive or negative investment view, they may elect with the approval of Citi Research management not to assign a target price and, thus, not derive an ETR. Analysts may place covered stocks "Under Review" in response to exceptional circumstances (e.g. lack of information critical to the analyst's thesis) affecting the company and / or trading in the company's securities (e.g. trading suspension). As soon as practically possible, the analyst will publish a note re-establishing a rating and investment thesis. To satisfy regulatory requirements, we correspond Under Review and Neutral to Hold in our ratings distribution table for our 12-month fundamental rating system. However, we reiterate that we do not consider Under Review to be a recommendation.

Relative three-month ratings: Citi Research may also assign a three-month relative call (or rating) to a stock to highlight expected out-performance (most preferred) or under-performance (least preferred) versus the geographic and industry sector over a 3 month period. The relative call may highlight a specific near-term catalyst or event impacting the company or the market that is anticipated to have a short-term price impact on the equity securities of the company. Absent any specific catalyst the analyst(s) will indicate the most and least preferred stocks in the universe of stocks under consideration, explaining the basis for this short-term view. This three-month view may be different from and does not affect a stock's fundamental equity rating, which reflects a longer-term total absolute return expectation. For purposes of NASD/NYSE ratings-distribution-disclosure rules, most preferred calls correspond to a buy recommendation and least preferred calls correspond to a sell recommendation. Any stock not assigned to a most preferred or least preferred call is considered non-relative-rated (NRR). For purposes of NASD/NYSE ratings-distribution-disclosure rules we correspond NRR to Hold in our ratings distribution table for our 3-month relative rating system. However, we reiterate that we do not consider NRR to be a recommendation.

Prior to October 8, 2011, the firm's stock recommendation system included a risk rating and an investment rating. Risk ratings, which took into account both price volatility and fundamental criteria, were: Low (L), Medium (M), High (H), and Speculative (S). Investment Ratings of Buy, Hold and Sell were a function of the Citi Research expectation of total return (forecast price appreciation and dividend yield within the next 12 months) and risk rating. Additionally, analysts could have placed covered stocks "Under Review" in response to exceptional circumstances (e.g. lack of information critical to the analyst's thesis) affecting the company and/or trading in the company's securities (e.g. trading suspension). Stocks placed "Under Review" were monitored daily by management and as practically possible, the analyst published a note re-establishing a rating and investment thesis. For securities in developed markets (US, UK, Europe, Japan, and Australia/New Zealand), investment ratings were: Buy (1) (expected total return of 10% or more for Low-Risk stocks, 15% or more for Medium-Risk stocks, 20% or more for High-Risk stocks, and 35% or more for Speculative stocks); Hold (2) (0%-10% for Low-Risk stocks, 0%-15% for Medium-Risk stocks, 0%-20% for High-Risk stocks, and 0%-35% for Speculative stocks); and Sell (3) (negative total return). For securities in emerging markets (Asia Pacific, Emerging Europe/Middle East/Africa, and Latin America), investment ratings were: Buy (1) (expected total return of 15% or more for Low-Risk stocks, 20% or more for Medium-Risk stocks, 30% or more for High-Risk stocks, and 40% or more for Speculative stocks); Hold (2) (5%-15% for Low-Risk stocks, 10%-20% for Medium-Risk stocks, 15%-30% for High-Risk stocks, and 20%-40% for Speculative stocks); and Sell (3) (5% or less for Low-Risk stocks, 10% or less for Medium-Risk stocks, 15% or less for High-Risk stocks, and 20% or less for Speculative stocks).

Investment ratings are determined by the ranges described above at the time of initiation of coverage, a change in investment and/or risk rating, or a change in target price (subject to limited management discretion). At other times, the expected total returns may fall outside of these ranges because of market price movements and/or other short-term volatility or trading patterns. Such interim deviations from specified ranges will be permitted but will become subject to review by Research Management. Your decision to buy or sell a security should be based upon your personal investment objectives and should be made only after evaluating the stock's expected performance and risk.
