

15 February 2013 | 12 pages

Global

Global Economics View

More Expansionary Monetary Policy Weakens the Currency: Get Used to It

- More expansionary monetary policy weakens the currency, ceteris paribus.
- That applies to Japan, just as it applies to the US, or any other country in the world. Since the exchange rate implications of monetary policy are sufficiently predictable and foreseeable – even if they are not of course perfectly predictable – it is reasonable and appropriate to hold monetary policymakers responsible and accountable for these exchange rate consequences and any external impacts. Whether these external consequences or implications are desired (or desirable), wanted or sought, or are instead just the (un)fortunate but foreseeable byproducts of monetary and fiscal policy undertaken for other reasons is irrelevant.

Willem Buiter

+44-20-7986-5944
willem.buiter@citi.com

Ebrahim Rahbari

+44-20-7986-6522
ebrahim.rahbari@citi.com

With thanks to

Jürgen Michels, Antonio Montilla, Nathan Sheets, Kiichi Murashima

See Appendix A-1 for Analyst Certification, Important Disclosures and non-US research analyst disclosures.

Citi Research is a division of Citigroup Global Markets Inc. (the "Firm"), which does and seeks to do business with companies covered in its research reports. As a result, investors should be aware that the Firm may have a conflict of interest that could affect the objectivity of this report. Investors should consider this report as only a single factor in making their investment decision.

More expansionary monetary policy weakens the currency: get used to it

More expansionary monetary policy weakens the currency, ceteris paribus

More expansionary monetary policy weakens the currency, ceteris paribus.¹ That applies to Japan, just as it applies to the US, or any other country in the world. Since the exchange rate implications of monetary policy are predictable and foreseeable – even if they are not perfectly predictable – monetary policymakers are responsible and accountable for these. Whether these consequences or implications are desired (or desirable), wanted or sought is irrelevant.

The recent G7 statement on exchange rates

The G7 statement on currencies of February 12, 2013 was an extraordinary – in its banality.

The G7 statement on currencies of February 12, 2013 was an extraordinary exercise in banality, Newspeak and obfuscation. We cite it here in full:

"We, the G7 Ministers and Governors, reaffirm our longstanding commitment to market determined exchange rates and to consult closely in regard to actions in foreign exchange markets. We reaffirm that our fiscal and monetary policies have been and will remain oriented towards meeting our respective domestic objectives using domestic instruments, and that we will not target exchange rates. We are agreed that excessive volatility and disorderly movements in exchange rates can have adverse implications for economic and financial stability. We will continue to consult closely on exchange markets and cooperate as appropriate."

The first sentence ("We, the G7 Ministers and Governors, reaffirm our longstanding commitment to market determined exchange rates and to consult closely in regard to actions in foreign exchange markets") is harmless. It tries to reconcile a belief in market determined exchange rates with the recognition that governments or central banks can be major, even dominant, players in the foreign exchange markets and other key asset markets. The second-to-last sentence ("We are agreed that excessive volatility and disorderly movements in exchange rates can have adverse implications for economic and financial stability") falls firmly into the 'stating the obvious', category. The last sentence ("We will continue to consult closely on exchange markets and cooperate as appropriate") should probably be read as: 'And remember we are watching you. And 'you', means Japan, if you really want to know'.

The statement that "... our fiscal and monetary policies have been and will remain oriented towards meeting our respective domestic objectives using domestic instruments, and that we will not target exchange rates" is somewhere between Newspeak and gobbledygook. The gobbledygook probably in part reflects the tussle between the German and the French governments about the appropriate degree of interference by governments in foreign exchange markets, but that is unlikely to have been the only source of contention.²

¹ See also Buiter and Rahbari (2011)

² For instance, on February 5, French President Hollande stated that 'The euro should not fluctuate according to the mood of the markets' and 'A monetary zone must have an exchange rate policy. If not it will be subjected to an exchange rate that does not reflect the real state of the economy.' 'The eurozone must, through its heads of state and government, decide on a medium-term exchange rate'. German government spokesman Seibert quickly responded 'We are convinced that exchange rates reflect the economic fundamentals, especially flexible ones. We are open to a discussion with France about it, but the German government doesn't think that an exchange rate policy is an appropriate instrument to boost competitiveness. It may set some short-term impulses, but nothing sustainable.' See <http://www.ft.com/intl/cms/s/0/5ffe511a-6f7e-11e2-956b-00144feab49a.html> and <http://euobserver.com/economic/118971>

“Domestic objectives” could mean ‘nationalistic objectives’, that is objectives of national governments that only allow for the wellbeing of their own citizens. Or it could mean objectives of national governments that can be pursued by that government without any repercussions for the rest of the world. National objectives that can be pursued effectively without impacting the rest of the world are few and far between. A nation’s monetary and fiscal policies will typically have consequences both for domestic residents and for the rest of the world. Another interpretation is that “domestic objectives” refers to what used to be called “internal balance” (full employment and price stability for a specific national or regional economy), with “external objectives” referring to ‘external balance’ (say, a sustainable current account balance or a competitive real exchange rate). But, of course, monetary policy affects both internal and external balance and so does fiscal policy.

What are “domestic instruments”? This could mean instruments under the control of the domestic authorities, regardless of whether they impact only domestic residents and the domestic economy or in addition affect the rest of the world, through the exchange rate or other mechanisms. National monetary and fiscal policy fall into that category. Of course, if we tighten the definition to mean instruments under the control of the domestic authorities that in addition only influence domestic variables (GDP, employment, inflation) and do not have any impact on the nominal and real exchange rate, on external interest rates, external asset prices and foreign economic activity, that rules out national monetary and fiscal policy for sure.

Finally, the fact that G7 policy makers “will not target exchange rates” does not mean that their monetary and fiscal policy instruments will not have predictable, foreseeable, significant and lasting effect on nominal and real exchange rates.

Monetary policy makers are responsible for all foreseeable consequences or implications of their actions. Whether these consequences or implications are desired (or desirable), wanted or sought is irrelevant. Whether these consequences can be characterized as objectives (domestic or external/international) or as unintended and perhaps even undesirable external consequences, has no implications for whether the domestic authorities are responsible and should be accountable for these external consequences. If someone shouts ‘fire’ in a crowded theatre, with the objective of alerting those nearest to the fire extinguishers, that person is likely to be held responsible and accountable for the stampede that is likely to result.

Figure 1. Selected Countries – Real Effective Exchange Rate (Jan-2007=100), 2007-2012.

Note: Lower values imply an appreciated real effective exchange rate.

Source: BIS and Citi Research

Expansionary monetary policy in an open economy with a floating exchange rate operates at least in part through a weakening of the currency

Expansionary monetary policy weakens the currency

Expansionary monetary policy in an open economy with a floating exchange rate operates at least in part through a weakening of the currency.

This is true regardless of the degree of cross-border mobility of financial capital. The G7, of course, operate under conditions of virtually unrestricted international capital mobility. It is true whether or not monetary policy operates through the traditional channels of cuts in the official policy rate (often a target rate for the uncollateralized overnight interbank rate, like the Federal Funds Target Rate in the US, the fixed rate for the Main Refinancing Operations for the Eurozone, Bank Rate for the UK and the target for the uncollateralized overnight call rate in the case of Japan). Market beliefs about the future course of the official policy rate will often be an important driver of longer-term interest rates, and 'forward guidance' about likely future values of the official policy rate, or about the policy reaction function that is likely to govern the future setting of the official policy rate, can be an important policy instrument in its own right (see also Yellen (2011b)). Expansionary monetary policy also causes the effective (trade-weighted) exchange rate to depreciate, other things being equal, when the central bank engages in balance sheet expansion at a given official policy rate, say because that policy rate is stuck at and constrained by the zero lower bound or effective lower bound.³

Regardless of whether central bank balance sheet expansions take the form of quantitative easing (QE) or of credit easing (CE) or qualitative easing (called enhanced credit support by the ECB), they influence financial and real asset prices, the real economy, and/or wages and the prices of goods and services – and they will do so at least in part by weakening the currency.⁴ If the central bank asset purchases take the form of outright purchases of foreign currency-denominated assets (effectively non-sterilised foreign exchange purchases), as has been advocated for Japan by Kazumasa Iwata (the President of the Japan Center for Economic Research and one candidate to succeed the current Bank of Japan Governor Masaaki Shirakawa when he retires on March 19), the weakening of the external value of the currency may be greater than if the same quantum of otherwise similar domestic currency-denominated instruments are purchased. But even if the central bank purchases only domestic currency-denominated assets, the external value of the currency will weaken, ceteris paribus. The only conditions under which expansionary monetary policy under market-determined exchange rates will fail to weaken the external value of the currency is when the economy is in a perfect liquidity trap, with interest rates at all maturities at their effective lower bounds. Under these conditions, of course, expansionary monetary policy has no effect on anything – domestic or external, real or nominal.

³ Once the official policy rate is at the effective lower bound for nominal interest rates, the liability side of the central bank's balance sheet becomes irrelevant. Whether the asset purchases or loans by the central bank are monetized or sterilized (through the issuance of non-monetary liabilities like term deposits, central bank bills or central bank bonds) will not influence the effectiveness (or lack of it) of the central bank's asset purchases or lending operations.

⁴ By QE we mean outright purchases of securities or collateralised loans that don't change the average liquidity or creditworthiness of the assets held by the central bank. Credit easing (CE) or qualitative easing (called enhanced credit support by the ECB) is to be understood here as balance sheet expansions or changes in the composition of the assets of the central bank that reduce the average liquidity and creditworthiness of the central bank's assets, if these actions are effective.

Cet. Par.

The 'ceteris paribus' qualification applies also to the exchange rate implications of monetary policy

Economists get a lot of stick for starting every other sentence with the words "ceteris paribus" or "other things being equal". This particular bit of stick is undeserved. It is both true that other things are never equal in the real world and that it is extremely important to precede every statement about the likely consequences of a policy action, shock or other exogenous event with the words: other things being equal. Such counterfactual policy analyses should not be confused with unconditional forecasts. Precision is not evasion.

Expansionary monetary policy can be 'beggar-thy-neighbour'

Expansionary monetary policy can be 'beggar-thy-neighbour'

Under empirically relevant conditions for the G7, expansionary monetary policy in, say, Japan, boosts domestic demand (that is, demand by domestic residents or 'absorption', the sum of public spending on goods and services, private domestic investment and private domestic consumption) and reduces the trade balance deficit (or increases the trade balance surplus). To the extent that domestic interest rates at a significant range of maturities are lowered and domestic financial asset prices are boosted, the increase in domestic demand can be larger than the increase in domestic demand for domestically produced goods and services. In that case, some of the increase in domestic demand spills over into increased demand for imports from the rest of the world. This mitigates the adverse effect on activity in the rest of the world of the increase in Japan's external trade surplus (and the matching increase in the rest of the world's trade deficit brought about by the weakening of the effective exchange rate of the yen caused by expansionary monetary policy in Japan). But as long as transmission to the rest of the world is only through the exchange rate, expansionary monetary policy in one country is always beggar-thy-neighbour for the rest of the world.

Policy responses abroad or asset prices domestically or abroad may outweigh the contractionary effects of expansionary monetary policy on the rest of the world

Of course, interest rates in the rest of the world may be lowered and financial and real asset prices boosted by the expansionary monetary policy action in one country, even if monetary policy makers in the rest of the world do not respond to the expansionary policy in Japan. This is more likely the larger the weight in global financial markets of the country engaged in expansionary monetary policy. If the reaction functions of foreign monetary policy makers cause them to cut the official policy rate or engage in QE or CE when expansionary foreign monetary policy drives down foreign interest rates and strengthens the external value of their currency, the likelihood increases that the total impact of an expansionary monetary policy action in Japan, say, will benefit global economic activity.

Empirically, the jury is out on whether, ceteris paribus, expansionary monetary policy in the US, say, weakens economic activity outside the US. It is almost certain to boost global activity. It is, however, definitely possible that the boost provided by lower interest rates and a weaker US dollar to US activity exceeds the increase in global activity, and that the rest of the world is hurt more by the deterioration in its trade balance than it benefits from the other external transmission channels of US monetary policy. A lot depends on the details of the policy experiment and the assumed response of foreign policy makers.

The response to the rhetorical question asked by US officials on a number of occasions, which can be paraphrased as, 'would the rest of the world really prefer a stronger US dollar and a weaker US economy over a weaker US dollar and a stronger US economy?' can therefore only be: 'we're not too sure' (see e.g. Bernanke (2012, and Yellen (2011a)). Yellen (2011a) recognizes explicitly that whether expansionary US monetary policy is beggar-thy-neighbour or foreign

Figure 2. Selected Countries – Trade Openness (% of GDP), 1947-2012

Note: Trade openness defined as sum of exports and imports of goods and services divided by GDP. EA values exclude intra-EA trade.

Source: National Sources and Citi Research

Exchange rates are affected by relative monetary policy stances

Most major central banks have recently engaged in very loose monetary policy, limiting the effects on exchange rates economic activity promoting is an empirical matter. The empirical issue of whether the external 'locomotive' effect of expansionary monetary policy dominates its beggar-thy-neighbour exchange rate effect remains unresolved.⁵

The answer may not be very different for the US from what it is for Japan, as the trade openness of the US and Japanese economies (as measured by imports plus exports of goods and services as a percentage of GDP) has become rather similar in recent years, at around 31 percent of GDP. This is shown in Figure 2, together with the more recent data on the euro area (EA).

Why does QE/CE not show up more in exchange rate behaviour?

The reason is simple: everyone is doing it. Since the Fed started to engage in large-scale CE in late November 2008 (purchasing $600bn in mortgage-backed and agency securities) and in large-scale QE in August 2010 and again in September 2012, most of the issuers of the other significant global currencies have imitated and emulated the Fed (see Yellen (2011a)). The Bank of England engaged first in CE (through the Special Liquidity Scheme announced on October 8, 2008) and then in QE (on an even larger scale as a share of GDP than the Fed). The ECB, too, has engaged in aggressive balance sheet expansion, mainly through CE, both in the form of outright purchases of euro area periphery sovereign debt through the Securities Market Programme (SMP) and through the extension of large amounts of loans to counterparties of frequently doubtful solvency against collateral often issued by governments of doubtful solvency, as with the LTROs. Japan, in contrast, engaged in much smaller-scale QE and CE.

The huge injections of liquidity by the Fed, the ECB and the Bank of England and the more modest balance sheet expansion by the Bank of Japan showed up in the prices of most liquid financial assets (and in commodity prices) but not in the effective exchange rates of the US dollar, the euro and sterling, although there was a steady appreciation of the yen, which only reversed when the new Japanese government at the end of 2012 began to put material pressure on the Bank of Japan to implement a significant relaxation of monetary policy. Emerging markets also relaxed monetary policy when confronted with the wall of advanced economy liquidity coming their way, in an attempt to limit the appreciation of their currencies.

⁵ "Finally, any costs for emerging market economies of monetary easing in advanced economies should be set against the very real benefits of those policies. The slowing of growth in the emerging markets this year in large part reflects their decelerating exports to the United States, Europe, and other advanced economies. Therefore, monetary easing that supports the recovery in the advanced economies should stimulate trade and boost growth in emerging market economies as well." (Bernanke (2012)); also "To conclude, the Federal Reserve is providing additional monetary accommodation to achieve its dual mandate of maximum employment and price stability. This policy not only helps strengthen the U.S. economic recovery, but by boosting U.S. spending and growth, it has the effect of helping support the global economy as well." Bernanke (2012)); and "Finally, I would like to comment on the critique that our asset purchase program is meant to promote U.S. growth at the expense of other nations by depreciating the dollar and enhancing U.S. competitiveness. That argument ignores the fact that stimulating growth in the United States is also likely to boost our demand for foreign goods and promote growth abroad. This effect will provide an important offset to the other implication of U.S. monetary stimulus that I discussed earlier—that it may lead to moderate movements in the foreign exchange value of the dollar that tend to lower U.S. demand for foreign goods", (Yellen (2011a)).

Figure 3. Selected Countries – National Central Bank Balance Sheet (% of GDP), 1998-2012

Source: National Central Banks and Citi Research

The monetary drivers of bilateral or effective exchange rates are always the relative stances of monetary policy in the countries involved. With Japan likely to adopt in the future a significantly more expansionary monetary policy than in the past, the beggar-thy-neighbour impact on Japan of QE and CE in the US, the UK and the euro area will likely be mitigated or reversed completely. With the ECB now pursuing the relative tightest monetary policy among the FED, ECB, Bank of Japan and Bank of England quartet, we can expect the euro to be the leading appreciating currency.

It is clear that Japan is unlikely to get scolded in public about its more expansionary monetary policy by nations or regions in the developed world with an independent currency and monetary policy. After all, they are only just beginning to do what the US, the UK and the ECB have been doing for years. The fact that the US, the UK and the ECB don't go on the record as seeking to weaken their currencies through expansionary monetary policy does not alter the reality that a weaker currency is a key and inevitable part of the transmission mechanism of more expansionary monetary policy when the exchange rate is market determined. The Fed and the ECB may not like this feature of the transmission mechanism. They may prefer to live in a world where there is no exchange rate. Unfortunately for them, this is not the world the Fed, the ECB and the Bank of England or anyone else lives in. Only the world as a whole has no exchange rate.

Of course, Japan was never likely to avoid scolding by those increasingly confident major emerging market countries with largely market-determined exchange rates, such as Brazil and Russia. The high level of official foreign currency reserves of these countries and a number of administrative and fiscal restrictions to capital mobility illustrate that even these countries do not wholly leave the determination of their exchange rates to the market. Of course, many other EM countries have long engaged in much more overt forms of exchange rate management. Those countries, notably China, may not complain about the direct exchange rate implications of the extraordinary liquidity creation of AE central banks, but rather the implications for price stability and financial stability of the 'Wall of Money' in their countries.

Japan may from now on avoid using open-mouth operations to weaken its currency

Japan may, to respect fundamentally irrelevant diplomatic niceties, not present its future monetary policy as designed to weaken the yen to boost net exports and economic activity. Using 'open mouth operations' would strengthen the effect of monetary policy on the exchange rate if those statements are a rhetorical expression of a commitment to pursue policy actions that would drive the currency in the desired direction, in the spirit of 'forward guidance' for exchange rate policy.⁶ But more expansionary Japanese monetary policy will inevitably work in part through its effect on exchange rates in any case, if it is effective. The good news for the rest of the world is that Japan proposes to combine its more expansionary monetary policy with a fiscal stimulus of some 10 trillion yen. Expansionary fiscal policy, holding constant the stance of current and expected future monetary policy, in a world with a market-determined exchange rate and a high degree of international capital mobility, will strengthen the external value of the currency and cause a decline in Japan's trade surplus. This assumes that the fiscal stimulus does not create market doubts about the solvency of the sovereign. It is therefore possible that, as long as Japan combines its monetary stimulus with a fiscal boost, there will be little impact on the external value of the yen. Global economic activity would be boosted, and both Japan and its trading partners could experience higher levels of activity, driven by domestic demand in Japan and by external demand in the rest of the world. And this could happen even without a further G7 communique.

⁶ The reverse also applies. If statements regarding the exchange rate are merely 'cheap talk' and not backed up by policy action that would support the announced intention, open-mouth operations may still initially move exchange rates in the desired direction, but that would be akin to a 'foreign exchange bubble' which would eventually burst.

Perhaps the most important lasting consequences of the expansionary monetary policies pursued by the advanced economies are not going to come through the conventional monetary policy transmission mechanisms at all. Instead they are likely to be the by-product of the extraordinarily low safe nominal and real rates of interest throughout the world (especially in the advanced economies) and the unprecedented amounts of liquidity provided by the leading advanced economy central banks. While recognising the contribution made to mitigating the consequences for output and employment of the North Atlantic financial crisis, we think it is likely that there will be a future price to pay because of the misallocation of credit and capital encouraged by these ultra-low safe rates of interest and the near-unlimited availability of central bank liquidity to the banking sector and the shadow banking sector. There is evidence of an increasingly frantic search for yield driven by the low level of safe yields which encourages growing numbers of investors to take on more risk than would have been deemed acceptable even during the boom years before the crisis. Some of this excess liquidity is showing up as incipient credit and asset market booms and bubbles in Emerging Markets. And where boom and bubble lead, bust soon follows.

Rather than worrying about the exchange rate impacts of expansionary monetary policy, conventional and/or unconventional, the G7 and G20 should focus on better macro-prudential and microprudential oversight and more effective controls to avoid the emergence of new asset and credit booms and bubbles before the world has even recovered from the last bust.

References

Bernanke, Ben S. (2012), U.S. Monetary Policy and International Implications, Speech given at the “Challenges of the Global Financial System: Risks and Governance under Evolving Globalization”, A High-Level Seminar sponsored by Bank of Japan- International Monetary Fund, Tokyo, Japan, October 4, <http://www.federalreserve.gov/newsevents/speech/bernanke20121014a.htm>

Buiter, Willem and Rahbari, Ebrahim, "The 'Strong Dollar' Policy of the US: Alice-in-Wonderland Semantics vs. Economic Reality" (long version), Citi Economics, Global Economics View, 26 May 2011.

Yellen, Janet L. (2011a), “The Federal Reserve's Asset Purchase Program”, speech given at The Brimmer Policy Forum, Allied Social Science Associations Annual Meeting, Denver, Colorado, January 8, <http://www.federalreserve.gov/newsevents/speech/yellen20110108a.htm>

Yellen, Janet L. (2011b), “Unconventional Monetary Policy and Central Bank Communications”, address given at the University of Chicago Booth School of Business US Monetary Policy Forum, New York, New York, February 25, <http://www.federalreserve.gov/newsevents/speech/yellen20110225a.h>

Appendix A-1

Analyst Certification

The research analyst(s) primarily responsible for the preparation and content of this research report are named in bold text in the author block at the front of the product except for those sections where an analyst's name appears in bold alongside content which is attributable to that analyst. Each of these analyst(s) certify, with respect to the section(s) of the report for which they are responsible, that the views expressed therein accurately reflect their personal views about each issuer and security referenced and were prepared in an independent manner, including with respect to Citigroup Global Markets Inc and its affiliates. No part of the research analyst's compensation was, is, or will be, directly or indirectly, related to the specific recommendation(s) or view(s) expressed by that research analyst in this report.

IMPORTANT DISCLOSURES

Analysts' compensation is determined based upon activities and services intended to benefit the investor clients of Citigroup Global Markets Inc. and its affiliates ("the Firm"). Like all Firm employees, analysts receive compensation that is impacted by overall firm profitability which includes investment banking revenues.

For important disclosures (including copies of historical disclosures) regarding the companies that are the subject of this Citi Research product ("the Product"), please contact Citi Research, 388 Greenwich Street, 28th Floor, New York, NY, 10013, Attention: Legal/Compliance [E6WYB6412478]. In addition, the same important disclosures, with the exception of the Valuation and Risk assessments and historical disclosures, are contained on the Firm's disclosure website at https://www.citivelocity.com/cvr/eppublic/citi_research_disclosures. Valuation and Risk assessments can be found in the text of the most recent research note/report regarding the subject company. Historical disclosures (for up to the past three years) will be provided upon request.

NON-US RESEARCH ANALYST DISCLOSURES

Non-US research analysts who have prepared this report (i.e., all research analysts listed below other than those identified as employed by Citigroup Global Markets Inc.) are not registered/qualified as research analysts with FINRA. Such research analysts may not be associated persons of the member organization and therefore may not be subject to the NYSE Rule 472 and NASD Rule 2711 restrictions on communications with a subject company, public appearances and trading securities held by a research analyst account. The legal entities employing the authors of this report are listed below:

Citigroup Global Markets Ltd

Willem Buiters; Ebrahim Rahbari

OTHER DISCLOSURES

For securities recommended in the Product in which the Firm is not a market maker, the Firm is a liquidity provider in the issuers' financial instruments and may act as principal in connection with such transactions. The Firm is a regular issuer of traded financial instruments linked to securities that may have been recommended in the Product. The Firm regularly trades in the securities of the issuer(s) discussed in the Product. The Firm may engage in securities transactions in a manner inconsistent with the Product and, with respect to securities covered by the Product, will buy or sell from customers on a principal basis.

Securities recommended, offered, or sold by the Firm: (i) are not insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation; (ii) are not deposits or other obligations of any insured depository institution (including Citibank); and (iii) are subject to investment risks, including the possible loss of the principal amount invested. Although information has been obtained from and is based upon sources that the Firm believes to be reliable, we do not guarantee its accuracy and it may be incomplete and condensed. Note, however, that the Firm has taken all reasonable steps to determine the accuracy and completeness of the disclosures made in the Important Disclosures section of the Product. The Firm's research department has received assistance from the subject company(ies) referred to in this Product including, but not limited to, discussions with management of the subject company(ies). Firm policy prohibits research analysts from sending draft research to subject companies. However, it should be presumed that the author of the Product has had discussions with the subject company to ensure factual accuracy prior to publication. All opinions, projections and estimates constitute the judgment of the author as of the date of the Product and these, plus any other information contained in the Product, are subject to change without notice. Prices and availability of financial instruments also are subject to change without notice. Notwithstanding other departments within the Firm advising the companies discussed in this Product, information obtained in such role is not used in the preparation of the Product. Although Citi Research does not set a predetermined frequency for publication, if the Product is a fundamental research report, it is the intention of Citi Research to provide research coverage of the/those issuer(s) mentioned therein, including in response to news affecting this issuer, subject to applicable quiet periods and capacity constraints. The Product is for informational purposes only and is not intended as an offer or solicitation for the purchase or sale of a security. Any decision to purchase securities mentioned in the Product must take into account existing public information on such security or any registered prospectus.

Investing in non-U.S. securities, including ADRs, may entail certain risks. The securities of non-U.S. issuers may not be registered with, nor be subject to the reporting requirements of the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission. There may be limited information available on foreign securities. Foreign companies are generally not subject to uniform audit and reporting standards, practices and requirements comparable to those in the U.S. Securities of some foreign companies may be less liquid and their prices more volatile than securities of comparable U.S. companies. In addition, exchange rate movements may have an adverse effect on the value of an investment in a foreign stock and its corresponding dividend payment for U.S. investors. Net dividends to ADR investors are estimated, using withholding tax rates conventions, deemed accurate, but investors are urged to consult their tax advisor for exact dividend computations. Investors who have received the Product from the Firm may be prohibited in certain states or other jurisdictions from purchasing securities mentioned in the Product from the Firm. Please ask your Financial Consultant for additional details. Citigroup Global Markets Inc. takes responsibility for the Product in the United States. Any orders by US investors resulting from the information contained in the Product may be placed only through Citigroup Global Markets Inc.

Important Disclosures for Morgan Stanley Smith Barney LLC Customers: Morgan Stanley & Co. LLC (Morgan Stanley) research reports may be available about the companies that are the subject of this Citi Research research report. Ask your Financial Advisor or use smithbarney.com to view any available Morgan Stanley research reports in addition to Citi Research research reports.

Important disclosure regarding the relationship between the companies that are the subject of this Citi Research research report and Morgan Stanley Smith Barney LLC and its affiliates are available at the Morgan Stanley Smith Barney disclosure website at www.morganstanleysmithbarney.com/researchdisclosures.

For Morgan Stanley and Citigroup Global Markets, Inc. specific disclosures, you may refer to www.morganstanley.com/researchdisclosures and https://www.citivelocity.com/cvr/eppublic/citi_research_disclosures.

This Citi Research research report has been reviewed and approved on behalf of Morgan Stanley Smith Barney LLC. This review and approval was conducted by the same person who reviewed this research report on behalf of Citi Research. This could create a conflict of interest.

The Citigroup legal entity that takes responsibility for the production of the Product is the legal entity which the first named author is employed by.

The Product is made available in Australia through Citi Global Markets Australia Pty Ltd. (ABN 64 003 114 832 and AFSL No. 240992), participant of the ASX Group and regulated by the Australian Securities & Investments Commission. Citigroup Centre, 2 Park Street, Sydney, NSW 2000. The Product is made available in Australia to Private Banking wholesale clients through Citigroup Pty Limited (ABN 88 004 325 080 and AFSL 238098). Citigroup Pty Limited provides all financial product advice to Australian Private Banking wholesale clients through bankers and relationship managers. If there is any doubt about the suitability of investments held in Citigroup Private Bank accounts, investors should contact the Citigroup Private Bank in Australia. Citigroup companies may compensate affiliates and their representatives for providing products and services to clients. The Product is made available in Brazil by Citigroup Global Markets Brasil - CCTVM SA, which is regulated by CVM - Comissão de Valores Mobiliários, BACEN - Brazilian Central Bank, APIMEC - Associação dos Analistas e Profissionais de Investimento do Mercado de Capitais and ANBID - Associação Nacional dos Bancos de Investimento. Av. Paulista, 1111 - 11º andar - CEP. 01311920 - São Paulo - SP. If the Product is being made available in certain provinces of Canada by Citigroup Global Markets (Canada) Inc. ("CGM Canada"), CGM Canada has approved the Product. Citigroup Place, 123 Front Street West, Suite 1100, Toronto, Ontario M5J 2M3. This product is available in Chile through Banchile Corredores de Bolsa S.A., an indirect subsidiary of Citigroup Inc., which is regulated by the Superintendencia de Valores y Seguros. Agustinas 975, piso 2, Santiago, Chile. The Product is made available in France by Citigroup Global Markets Limited, which is authorised and regulated by Financial Services Authority. 1-5 Rue Paul Cézanne, 8ème, Paris, France. The Product is distributed in Germany by Citigroup Global Markets Deutschland AG ("CGMD"), which is regulated by Bundesanstalt fuer Finanzdienstleistungsaufsicht (BaFin). CGMD, Reuterweg 16, 60323 Frankfurt am Main. Research which relates to "securities" (as defined in the Securities and Futures Ordinance (Cap. 571 of the Laws of Hong Kong)) is issued in Hong Kong by, or on behalf of, Citigroup Global Markets Asia Limited which takes full responsibility for its content. Citigroup Global Markets Asia Ltd. is regulated by Hong Kong Securities and Futures Commission. If the Research is made available through Citibank, N.A., Hong Kong Branch, for its clients in Citi Private Bank, it is made available by Citibank N.A., Citibank Tower, Citibank Plaza, 3 Garden Road, Hong Kong. Citibank N.A. is regulated by the Hong Kong Monetary Authority. Please contact your Private Banker in Citibank N.A., Hong Kong, Branch if you have any queries on or any matters arising from or in connection with this document. The Product is made available in India by Citigroup Global Markets India Private Limited, which is regulated by Securities and Exchange Board of India. Bakhtawar, Nariman Point, Mumbai 400-021. The Product is made available in Indonesia through PT Citigroup Securities Indonesia. 5/F, Citibank Tower, Bapindo Plaza, Jl. Jend. Sudirman Kav. 54-55, Jakarta 12190. Neither this Product nor any copy hereof may be distributed in Indonesia or to any Indonesian citizens wherever they are domiciled or to Indonesian residents except in compliance with applicable capital market laws and regulations. This Product is not an offer of securities in Indonesia. The securities referred to in this Product have not been registered with the Capital Market and Financial Institutions Supervisory Agency (BAPEPAM-LK) pursuant to relevant capital market laws and regulations, and may not be offered or sold within the territory of the Republic of Indonesia or to Indonesian citizens through a public offering or in circumstances which constitute an offer within the meaning of the Indonesian capital market laws and regulations. The Product is made available in Israel through Citibank NA, regulated by the Bank of Israel and the Israeli Securities Authority. Citibank, N.A. Platinum Building, 21 Ha'arba'ah St, Tel Aviv, Israel. The Product is made available in Italy by Citigroup Global Markets Limited, which is authorised and regulated by Financial Services Authority. Via dei Mercanti, 12, Milan, 20121, Italy. The Product is made available in Japan by Citigroup Global Markets Japan Inc. ("CGMJ"), which is regulated by Financial Services Agency, Securities and Exchange Surveillance Commission, Japan Securities Dealers Association, Tokyo Stock Exchange and Osaka Securities Exchange. Shin-Marunouchi Building, 1-5-1 Marunouchi, Chiyoda-ku, Tokyo 100-6520 Japan. If the Product was distributed by SMBC Nikko Securities Inc. it is being so distributed under license. In the event that an error is found in an CGMJ research report, a revised version will be posted on the Firm's Citi Velocity website. If you have questions regarding Citi Velocity, please call (81 3) 6270-3019 for help. The Product is made available in Korea by Citigroup Global Markets Korea Securities Ltd., which is regulated by the Financial Services Commission, the Financial Supervisory Service and the Korea Financial Investment Association (KOFIA). Citibank Building, 39 Da-dong, Jung-gu, Seoul 100-180, Korea. KOFIA makes available registration information of research analysts on its website. Please visit the following website if you wish to find KOFIA registration information on research analysts of Citigroup Global Markets Korea Securities Ltd. <http://dis.kofia.or.kr/fs/dis2/fundMgr/DISFundMgrAnalystPop.jsp?companyCd=A03030&pageDiv=02>. The Product is made available in Korea by Citibank Korea Inc., which is regulated by the Financial Services Commission and the Financial Supervisory Service. Address is Citibank Building, 39 Da-dong, Jung-gu, Seoul 100-180, Korea. The Product is made available in Malaysia by Citigroup Global Markets Malaysia Sdn Bhd (Company No. 460819-D) ("CGMM") to its clients and CGMM takes responsibility for its contents. CGMM is regulated by the Securities Commission of Malaysia. Please contact CGMM at Level 43 Menara Citibank, 165 Jalan Ampang, 50450 Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia in respect of any matters arising from, or in connection with, the Product. The Product is made available in Mexico by Acciones y Valores Banamex, S.A. De C. V., Casa de Bolsa, Integrante del Grupo Financiero Banamex ("Accival") which is a wholly owned subsidiary of Citigroup Inc. and is regulated by Comisión Nacional Bancaria y de Valores. Reforma 398, Col. Juárez, 06600 Mexico, D.F. In New Zealand the Product is made available to 'wholesale clients' only as defined by s5C(1) of the Financial Advisers Act 2008 ("FAA") through Citigroup Global Markets Australia Pty Ltd (ABN 64 003 114 832 and AFSL No. 240992), an overseas financial adviser as defined by the FAA, participant of the ASX Group and regulated by the Australian Securities & Investments Commission. Citigroup Centre, 2 Park Street, Sydney, NSW 2000. The Product is made available in Pakistan by Citibank N.A. Pakistan branch, which is regulated by the State Bank of Pakistan and Securities Exchange Commission, Pakistan. AWT Plaza, 1.1. Chundrigar Road, P.O. Box 4889, Karachi-74200. The Product is made available in the Philippines through Citicorp Financial Services and Insurance Brokerage Philippines, Inc., which is regulated by the Philippines Securities and Exchange Commission. 20th Floor Citibank Square Bldg. The Product is made available in the Philippines through Citibank NA Philippines branch, Citibank Tower, 8741 Paseo De Roxas, Makati City, Manila. Citibank NA Philippines NA is regulated by The Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas. The Product is made available in Poland by Dom Maklerski Banku Handlowego SA an indirect subsidiary of Citigroup Inc., which is regulated by Komisja Nadzoru Finansowego. Dom Maklerski Banku Handlowego S.A. ul.Senatorska 16, 00-923 Warszawa. The Product is made available in the Russian Federation through ZAO Citibank, which is licensed to carry out banking activities in the Russian Federation in accordance with the general banking license issued by the Central Bank of the Russian Federation and brokerage activities in accordance with the license issued by the Federal Service for Financial Markets. Neither the Product nor any information contained in the Product shall be considered as advertising the securities mentioned in this report within the territory of the Russian Federation or outside the Russian Federation. The Product does not constitute an appraisal within the meaning of the Federal Law of the Russian Federation of 29 July 1998 No. 135-FZ (as amended) On Appraisal Activities in the Russian Federation. 8-10 Gasheka Street, 125047 Moscow. The Product is made available in Singapore through Citigroup Global Markets Singapore Pte. Ltd. ("CGMSPL"), a capital markets services license holder, and regulated by Monetary Authority of Singapore. Please contact CGMSPL at 8 Marina View, 21st Floor Asia Square Tower 1, Singapore 018960, in respect of any matters arising from, or in connection with, the analysis of this document. This report is intended for recipients who are accredited, expert and institutional investors as defined under the Securities and Futures Act (Cap. 289). The Product is made available by The Citigroup Private Bank in Singapore through Citibank, N.A., Singapore Branch, a licensed bank in Singapore that is regulated by Monetary Authority of Singapore. Please contact your Private Banker in Citibank N.A., Singapore Branch if you have any queries on or any matters arising from or in connection with this document. This report is intended for recipients who are accredited, expert and institutional investors as defined under the Securities and Futures Act (Cap. 289). This report is distributed in Singapore by Citibank Singapore Ltd ("CSL") to selected Citigold/Citigold Private Clients. CSL provides no independent research or analysis of the substance or in preparation of this report. Please contact your Citigold/Citigold Private Client Relationship Manager in CSL if you have any queries on or any matters arising from or in connection with this report. This report is intended for recipients who are accredited investors as defined under the Securities and Futures Act (Cap. 289). Citigroup Global Markets (Pty) Ltd. is incorporated in the Republic of South Africa (company registration number 2000/025866/07) and its registered office is at 145 West Street, Sandton, 2196, Saxonwold. Citigroup Global Markets (Pty) Ltd. is regulated by JSE Securities Exchange South Africa, South African Reserve Bank and the Financial Services Board. The investments and services contained herein are not available to private customers in South Africa. The Product is made available in Spain by Citigroup Global Markets Limited, which is authorised and regulated by Financial Services Authority. 29 Jose Ortega Y Gasset, 4th Floor, Madrid, 28006, Spain. The Product is made available in the Republic of China through Citigroup Global Markets Taiwan Securities Company Ltd. ("CGMTS"), 14 and 15F, No. 1, Songzhi Road, Taipei 110, Taiwan and/or through Citibank Securities (Taiwan) Company Limited ("CSTL"), 14 and 15F, No. 1, Songzhi Road, Taipei 110, Taiwan, subject to the respective license scope of each entity and the applicable laws and regulations in the Republic of China. CGMTS and CSTL are both regulated by the Securities and Futures Bureau of the Financial Supervisory Commission of Taiwan, the Republic of China. No portion of the Product may be reproduced or quoted in the Republic of China by the press or any third parties [without the written authorization of CGMTS and CSTL]. If the Product covers securities which are not allowed to be offered or traded in the Republic of China, neither the Product nor any information contained in the Product shall be considered as advertising the securities or making recommendation of the securities in the Republic of China. The Product is for informational purposes only and is not intended as an offer or solicitation for the purchase or sale of a security or financial products. Any decision to purchase securities or financial products mentioned in the Product must take into account existing public information on such security or the financial products or any registered prospectus. The Product is made available in Thailand through Citicorp Securities (Thailand) Ltd., which is regulated by the Securities and Exchange Commission of Thailand. 18/F, 22/F and 29/F, 82 North Sathorn Road, Silom, Bangrak, Bangkok 10500, Thailand. The Product is made available in Turkey through Citibank AS which is regulated by Capital Markets Board. Tekfen Tower, Eski Buyukdere Caddesi # 209 Kat 2B, 23294 Levent, Istanbul, Turkey. In the U.A.E., these materials (the "Materials") are communicated by Citigroup Global Markets Limited, DIFC branch ("CGML"), an entity registered in the Dubai International Financial Center ("DIFC") and licensed and regulated by the Dubai Financial Services Authority ("DFS") to Professional Clients and Market Counterparties only and should not be relied upon or distributed to Retail Clients. A distribution of the different Citi Research ratings distribution, in percentage terms for Investments in each sector covered is made available on request. Financial products and/or services to which the Materials relate will only be made available to Professional Clients and Market Counterparties. The Product is made available in United Kingdom by Citigroup Global Markets Limited, which is authorised and regulated by Financial Services Authority. This material may relate to investments or services of a person outside of the UK or to other matters which are not regulated by the FSA and further details as to where this may be the case are available upon request in respect of this material. Citigroup Centre, Canada Square, Canary Wharf, London, E14 5LB. The Product is made available in United States by Citigroup Global Markets Inc, which is a member of FINRA and registered with the US Securities and Exchange Commission. 388 Greenwich Street, New York, NY 10013. Unless specified to the contrary, within EU Member States, the Product is made available by Citigroup Global Markets Limited, which is regulated by Financial Services Authority.

Pursuant to Comissão de Valores Mobiliários Rule 483, Citi is required to disclose whether a Citi related company or business has a commercial relationship with the subject company. Considering that Citi operates multiple businesses in more than 100 countries around the world, it is likely that Citi has a commercial relationship with the subject company.

Many European regulators require that a firm must establish, implement and make available a policy for managing conflicts of interest arising as a result of publication or distribution of investment research. The policy applicable to Citi Research's Products can be found at https://www.citivelocity.com/cvr/eppublic/citi_research_disclosures.

Compensation of equity research analysts is determined by equity research management and Citigroup's senior management and is not linked to specific transactions or recommendations.

The Product may have been distributed simultaneously, in multiple formats, to the Firm's worldwide institutional and retail customers. The Product is not to be construed as providing investment services in any jurisdiction where the provision of such services would not be permitted.

Subject to the nature and contents of the Product, the investments described therein are subject to fluctuations in price and/or value and investors may get back less than originally invested. Certain high-volatility investments can be subject to sudden and large falls in value that could equal or exceed the amount invested. Certain investments contained in the Product may have tax implications for private customers whereby levels and basis of taxation may be subject to change. If in doubt, investors should seek advice from a tax adviser. The Product does not purport to identify the nature of the specific market or other risks associated with a particular transaction. Advice in the Product is general and should not be construed as personal advice given it has been prepared without taking account of the objectives, financial situation or needs of any particular investor. Accordingly, investors should, before acting on the advice, consider the appropriateness of the advice, having regard to their objectives, financial situation and needs. Prior to acquiring any financial product, it is the client's responsibility to obtain the relevant offer document for the product and consider it before making a decision as to whether to purchase the product. With the exception of our product that is made available only to Qualified Institutional Buyers (QIBs) and other product that is made available through other distribution channels only to certain categories of clients to satisfy legal or regulatory requirements, Citi Research concurrently disseminates its research via proprietary and non-proprietary electronic distribution platforms. Periodically, individual Citi Research analysts may also opt to circulate research posted on such platforms to one or more clients by email. Such email distribution is discretionary and is done only after the research has been disseminated via the aforementioned distribution channels. Citi Research simultaneously distributes product that is limited to QIBs only through email distribution.

The level and types of services provided by Citi Research analysts to clients may vary depending on various factors such as the client's individual preferences as to the frequency and manner of receiving communications from analysts, the client's risk profile and investment focus and perspective (e.g. market-wide, sector specific, long term, short-term etc.), the size and scope of the overall client relationship with Citi and legal and regulatory constraints. Citi Research product may source data from dataCentral. dataCentral is a Citi Research proprietary database, which includes Citi estimates, data from company reports and feeds from Reuters and Datastream.

© 2013 Citigroup Global Markets Inc. Citi Research is a division of Citigroup Global Markets Inc. Citi and Citi with Arc Design are trademarks and service marks of Citigroup Inc. and its affiliates and are used and registered throughout the world. All rights reserved. Any unauthorized use, duplication, redistribution or disclosure of this report (the "Product"), including, but not limited to, redistribution of the Product by electronic mail, posting of the Product on a website or page, and/or providing to a third party a link to the Product, is prohibited by law and will result in prosecution. The information contained in the Product is intended solely for the recipient and may not be further distributed by the recipient to any third party. Where included in this report, MSCI sourced information is the exclusive property of Morgan Stanley Capital International Inc. (MSCI). Without prior written permission of MSCI, this information and any other MSCI intellectual property may not be reproduced, disseminated or used to create any financial products, including any indices. This information is provided on an "as is" basis. The user assumes the entire risk of any use made of this information. MSCI, its affiliates and any third party involved in, or related to, computing or compiling the information hereby expressly disclaim all warranties of originality, accuracy, completeness, merchantability or fitness for a particular purpose with respect to any of this information. Without limiting any of the foregoing, in no event shall MSCI, any of its affiliates or any third party involved in, or related to, computing or compiling the information have any liability for any damages of any kind. MSCI, Morgan Stanley Capital International and the MSCI indexes are services marks of MSCI and its affiliates. The Firm accepts no liability whatsoever for the actions of third parties. The Product may provide the addresses of, or contain hyperlinks to, websites. Except to the extent to which the Product refers to website material of the Firm, the Firm has not reviewed the linked site. Equally, except to the extent to which the Product refers to website material of the Firm, the Firm takes no responsibility for, and makes no representations or warranties whatsoever as to, the data and information contained therein. Such address or hyperlink (including addresses or hyperlinks to website material of the Firm) is provided solely for your convenience and information and the content of the linked site does not in anyway form part of this document. Accessing such website or following such link through the Product or the website of the Firm shall be at your own risk and the Firm shall have no liability arising out of, or in connection with, any such referenced website.

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION IS AVAILABLE UPON REQUEST

EU30215B
